United States District Court For the Northern District of California

1 the Court DENIES the CIA's motion for judgment on the pleadings, 2 DENYING without prejudice the CIA's motion to amend the scheduling 3 order and GRANTS section I.A of the CIA's motion for a protective 4 order.

BACKGROUND

Because the Court's previous orders describe the allegations 6 7 of this case in sufficient detail, they will not be repeated here 8 in their entirety. In sum, Plaintiffs bring various claims against 9 Defendants arising from the United States' human experimentation programs, many of which were conducted at Edgewood Arsenal and Fort 10 Detrick, both located in Maryland. The CIA, along with the United 11 12 States Army, allegedly "planned, organized and executed" these Third Am. Compl. (3AC) ¶ 2. According to Plaintiffs, 13 programs. some individuals involved in administering these programs were on 14 15 the CIA's payroll. Plaintiffs further allege that others, who represented themselves to be Army officers, were in fact CIA 16 17 agents. The CIA allegedly understood that its activities had to be 18 concealed from "enemy forces" and the "American public in general" 19 because knowledge of them "would have serious repercussions in 20 political and diplomatic circles and would be detrimental to the 21 accomplishment of its mission." Id. ¶ 145 (citation and internal 22 quotation marks omitted).

At issue in this motion are Plaintiffs' remaining claims against the CIA. The parties do not dispute that Plaintiffs assert claims against the CIA based on a so-called secrecy oath that test participants were required to take. Pursuant to the oath, test participants allegedly agreed they would not divulge or make available any information related to

U.S. Army Intelligence Center interest or participation in the [volunteer program] to any individual, nation, organization, business, association, or other group or entity, not officially authorized to receive such information.

4 3AC ¶ 156. According to Plaintiffs, the test participants further 5 agreed that a violation of the oath would "render [them] liable to 6 punishment under the provisions of the Uniform Code of Military 7 Justice." Id. In or about September 2006, some test participants 8 allegedly received letters indicating that the Department of 9 Defense (DoD) granted them a partial release from the oath. The 10 letters stated that the test participants could "discuss exposure 11 information with their health care providers, but warn[ed] them not 12 to 'discuss anything that relates to operational information that might reveal chemical or biological warfare vulnerabilities or 13 14 capabilities.'" Id. ¶ 160. Plaintiffs allege that the secrecy 15 oath violated their constitutional rights and seek a declaration 16 that they "are released from any obligations or penalties" imposed by the oath. Id. ¶ 183. 17

18 The parties dispute whether Plaintiffs have any other claims 19 against the CIA. Plaintiffs maintain they continue to assert 20 "Constitutional due process claims" against the CIA related to the 21 agency's alleged obligations to notify test participants of the experiments' effects and to provide health care. Pls.' Opp'n at 22 23 10-11. The CIA disagrees, pointing to the Court's May 31, 2011 24 Order concerning the agency's December 6, 2010 motion to dismiss. 25 In its motion, the CIA sought

26 dismissal of two of Plaintiffs' claims against it: (1) Plaintiffs' claim that the CIA is obligated to provide the individual Plaintiffs with notice of chemicals to which they were allegedly exposed and any 28 known health effects related thereto; and (2) Plaintiffs'

1 claim that the CIA is obligated to provide medical care to the individual Plaintiffs. 2 Defs.' Partial Mot. to Dismiss Pls.' 3AC at 6. With respect to 3 Plaintiffs' so-called notice claim against it, the CIA asserted 4 that "Plaintiffs must identify a source of substantive law that 5 would require the CIA to provide notice to Plaintiffs." Id. at 7. 6 Likewise, the CIA asserted that Plaintiffs' so-called health care 7 claim against it had no legal basis. Id. at 15. In opposition to 8 the CIA's motion to dismiss their notice claim, Plaintiffs did not 9 assert that it was grounded in the United States Constitution. 10 Plaintiffs did not offer any substantive argument regarding their 11 health care claim against the CIA, asserting 12 Plaintiffs' core claim against the CIA seeks to require 13 the CIA to comply with its duty to notify test subjects about tests to which they were subjected. Although 14 Plaintiffs believe that the Court also could require the CIA to provide medical care to test subjects harmed by 15 the CIA's testing programs, Plaintiffs note that the medical care remedy they seek for test participants does 16 not depend on the CIA's provision of that care. 17 Pls.' Supp. Opp'n to Defs.' Partial Mot. to Dismiss at 2 n.2. 18 After considering the parties' papers, the Court granted the CIA's 19 motion and dismissed Plaintiffs' claims against the agency for 20 notice and health care. 21 On July 28, 2011, the CIA filed its present motion, seeking judgment on the pleadings or, in the alternative, summary judgment. 22 23 On August 9, 2011, the Court indicated that it would not convert 24 the CIA's motion into a motion for summary judgment, noting that 25 the parties had stipulated to have all dispositive motions heard on 26 April 5, 2012 at 2:00 p.m. 27 28

DISCUSSION

2 I. Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings

3 Rule 12(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides, "After the pleadings are closed but within such time as not to 4 5 delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings." 6 Judgment on the pleadings is proper when the moving party clearly 7 establishes on the face of the pleadings that no material issue of 8 fact remains to be resolved and that it is entitled to judgment as 9 a matter of law. Hal Roach Studios, Inc. v. Richard Feiner & Co., 10 Inc., 896 F.2d 1542, 1550 (9th Cir. 1990).

11 The CIA asserts that, based on their allegations, Plaintiffs 12 lack standing to bring claims against the agency regarding the 13 alleged secrecy oath. To establish standing, a plaintiff must show: "(1) he or she has suffered an injury in fact that is 14 15 concrete and particularized, and actual or imminent; (2) the injury is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury 16 17 is likely to be redressed by a favorable court decision." Salmon 18 Spawning & Recovery Alliance v. Gutierrez, 545 F.3d 1220, 1225 (9th 19 Cir. 2008). The CIA contends primarily that, because Plaintiffs do 20 not allege specifically that the agency administered the secrecy 21 oath, Plaintiffs do not demonstrate traceability and 22 redressability.

It is not evident from the 3AC that the CIA did not have any role in the secrecy oaths or that a court order against the agency would not redress Plaintiffs' alleged injuries. Plaintiffs plead facts about the CIA's pervasive involvement in planning, funding and executing the experimentation programs. Plaintiffs also plead that the CIA had an interest in concealing the programs from "enemy

Case4:09-cv-00037-CW Document281 Filed09/02/11 Page6 of 10

1 forces" and "the American public in general." 3AC ¶ 145 (citation 2 and internal quotation marks omitted). These allegations, 3 construed in Plaintiffs' favor, suggest that the challenged secrecy 4 oath could be traced fairly to the CIA and that a court order 5 directed at the CIA could redress Plaintiffs' alleged injuries.

Based on their pleadings, Plaintiffs have standing to bring claims against the CIA regarding the secrecy oath. Consequently, the CIA's motion for judgment on the pleadings must be denied.
II. Motion to Amend the Scheduling Order

10 The CIA moves to amend the scheduling order to permit it to 11 have its summary judgment motion heard before April 5, 2012 at 2:00 12 p.m., the date and time set by Court order pursuant to the parties' 13 stipulation. The CIA seeks to move for summary judgment on 14 Plaintiffs' claim regarding the alleged secrecy oaths, which the 15 CIA understands to be the remaining claim against it.

16 As noted above, the parties dispute whether Plaintiffs have 17 claims against the CIA, other than that regarding the secrecy 18 oaths. Plaintiffs maintain that they have claims against the CIA 19 for notice and health care under the Fifth Amendment's Due Process 20 Clause.

The Court disagrees. The CIA's previous motion to dismiss clearly specified that it was directed at Plaintiffs' claims for notice and health care. The motion indicated that these claims lacked any legal basis. Plaintiffs were on notice that the CIA was challenging these claims and had the opportunity to oppose dismissal by clarifying that the Due Process Clause afforded a basis for them. They did not do so.

Plaintiffs argue that, because the CIA's motion to dismiss

Case4:09-cv-00037-CW Document281 Filed09/02/11 Page7 of 10

1 "characterized Plaintiffs' injunctive and declaratory request for 2 notice as arising under the [Administrative Procedure Act (APA)] 3 and neglected to address the Constitutional basis for the claims," they were required to address only the "APA-based arguments" in 4 their opposition. Pls.' Opp'n to CIA's Mot. for J. on the 5 Pleadings at 12:1-2. The flaw in this argument is that the CIA 6 7 sought to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims for notice and health care in 8 their entirety. Nowhere in its motion did the CIA state that it 9 sought dismissal of these claims only to the extent that they were based on the APA. If the CIA had mischaracterized the legal theory 10 11 underlying their claims, to avoid dismissal, Plaintiffs had a duty 12 in their opposition to inform the CIA and the Court. Indeed, in their opposition to Defendants' motion to dismiss their first 13 amended complaint, Plaintiffs endeavored to clarify their claims 14 15 for relief to avoid dismissal. See, e.q., Pls.' Opp'n to Mot. to Dismiss 1st Am. Compl. 5:10-11 (noting that Defendants' argument 16 "rests on a fundamental mischaracterization of Plaintiffs' claims 17 18 and a misinterpretation of the APA"); id. at 7:9-11 ("Once again, 19 Defendants mischaracterize Plaintiffs' claim: it is based on 20 Defendants' failure to act in accordance with their legal duties, 21 not a challenge to Defendants' final actions.") (emphasis in 22 original). Plaintiffs did not do the same in opposing the CIA's 23 December 6, 2010 motion to dismiss.

Plaintiffs' claims against the CIA for notice and health care have been dismissed. If Plaintiffs wish to pursue these claims, they may file a supplemental opposition to the CIA's December 6, 27 2010 motion to dismiss their claims against the agency for notice and health care. In any supplemental opposition, Plaintiffs must brief how such claims are cognizable under the United States Constitution. The CIA may file a reply in support of its motion to dismiss. The CIA's reply shall be due fourteen days after any supplemental opposition is filed.

5 After it has been determined which claims Plaintiffs have against the CIA, the agency may request leave to notice for hearing 6 7 an early motion for summary judgment. The CIA may file an 8 administrative motion, pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-11, to make 9 this request. As discussed at the September 1, 2011 hearing, Plaintiffs and the CIA may reach an agreement regarding Plaintiffs' 10 secrecy oath claim against the agency, which may eliminate that 11 12 claim. Whether Plaintiffs have claims for notice and health care 13 against the CIA will depend on their supplemental opposition to the CIA's motion to dismiss. 14

15 III. Motion for a Protective Order

In section I.A of the CIA's motion for a protective order, the CIA argues that Plaintiffs do not have constitutional claims for notice and health care against the CIA and, accordingly, are not entitled to discovery on such claims. As explained above, Plaintiffs presently do not have any claims against the CIA for notice and health care. Accordingly, Plaintiffs are not entitled to discovery on these claims.

As it stands, Plaintiffs' secrecy oath claim will go forward.
Section I.B of the CIA's motion for a protective order concerns the scope of discovery as to this claim and is referred to Magistrate Judge Corley.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES the CIA's motion

27

Case4:09-cv-00037-CW Document281 Filed09/02/11 Page9 of 10

1 for judgment on the pleadings (Docket No. 245), DENIES without 2 prejudice CIA's motion to amend the scheduling order (Docket No. 3 266) and GRANTS section I.A of the CIA's motion for a protective order (Docket No. 252). Presently, Plaintiffs' claims against the 4 5 CIA for declaratory and injunctive relief regarding the challenged secrecy oaths are their only outstanding claims against the agency. 6 7 Thus, Plaintiffs shall not take discovery based solely on claims 8 against the CIA for notice or health care. This ruling does not 9 address the scope of discovery against the CIA as to Plaintiffs' secrecy oath claim or their claims against other Defendants. 10

11 As explained above, if Plaintiffs wish to pursue claims 12 against the CIA for notice and health care, they must file a 13 supplemental opposition to the CIA's December 6, 2010 motion to 14 This supplemental opposition shall brief how claims dismiss. 15 against the CIA for notice and health care are cognizable under the United States Constitution. The CIA's response shall be due 16 17 fourteen days after any supplemental opposition is filed. 18 Plaintiffs' supplemental opposition and the CIA's response shall 19 not exceed ten pages. Unless a hearing is set, the Court will 20 decide the matter on the papers.

21 Once it is determined which claims Plaintiffs assert against 22 the CIA, the agency may file an administrative motion for leave to 23 file an early summary judgment motion on any claims against it. In 24 any administrative motion, the CIA must show that filing an early 25 motion would serve interests of judicial efficiency.

26 Section I.B of the CIA's motion for a protective order is 27 referred to Magistrate Judge Jacqueline Scott Corley.
